My company has been installing Geothermal systems for 35 years when I started installing geotherma thermal we installed pump and dump system. Then the manufactures wanted you to install close loop systems and I decided to stop installing Geothermal I had lots of other work and didn't want to be butt fusing pipe and dealing with methanol. About 15 years ago the geothermal tax brakes came and I decided to get back into Geothermal that is when I found DX systems do to the ease of installation and the better performance. With direct exchange we do not need any specialized equipment like loop pumps flushing carts methanol. Eliminating the specialized equipment makes the Job much easier and the maintenance is the same if you had a air to air heat pump

From the smaller footprint field, easy in which refrigerant piping enters the house and the simplicity of equipment and air handler connections offers tremendous advantages. When presenting DX to my customers I feel I am offering them the most efficient equipment manufactured
